

The Leadership Table will meet to answer the following questions and make a decision when the agreed processes of engagement and information gathering have been achieved –

1. Who has been involved in conversations about the proposal, what has been the process of listening, and over what time period?
2. Where does this proposal fit into our community's plan?
3. How many lives will be better off from this proposal and how will we know?
4. Is this proposal considered to be culturally-safe by our Karulbo First Nations leaders and our Cross-Cultural Leaders group who hold the authority and trust of their communities?
5. Will the work in this proposal be sustainable and offer opportunities for our community members and our community-controlled service sector?

An underpinning question as decision-making unfolds is:

Have we heard from the right voices to allow us to make a good decision at this stage and do we have the right people at the Table today to make this decision?
